AT ALBANY.

The Senate in Session All Night-A Compromise Effected.

ALBANY, March 11.—Senate—It was almost half past 8 o'clock this morning, when the physical and numerical remnant of thirty-two senators and fifteen correspondents issued from the Senate chamber. At 2:30 the first call of the Senate was suspended, and an atte made to proceed with the business. The same failure was made and Mr. Fassett again moved a call of the Senate and the sergeant at arms was sent after Senators Collins, Sheard and Jacobs, all of whom had skipped out under various pretences. Roll calls at that time were answered from various corners of the Senate chamber, the members being wrapped up in their great coats and asleep on the lounges. At $ o'clock the call again suspended and at a quarter compromise. The Republicans through Mr. Fassett, offered an amendment to rule 3 as follows: He (the Lieutenant Governor) shall have the right when in the city of Albany to designate in writing a member to perform his duties, but not for any longer time than 24 hours from the time of making such designation, which may be revoked at any time by the Senate." The amendment adjourned until g p. m. and society column would have been The senate at the time of adjournment very delicious reading on Sunday morning_since a printer follows copy, and a lustre of the fabric. The Art of Conversation.

Two winters ago a cultivated and entermining woman looked about for an opportunity of exercising her pretty talents with profitable results. With almost the inspiration of genius she concluded to hold classes in conversation. On first thought her friends were greatly amused, and yet, when her explanation was made they began to wonder how society had moved along satisfactorily without the aid of lessons in conversation. The woman's idea was clever, indeed. "People," she said, "are taught to read, write, walk, eat, dance, play and sing, but rarely are they taught to use their tongues in everyday speech with ability and discretion." She therefore proposed not only to lecture, but also to give practical lessons to the chyly or stubbornly silent woman the woman awkward in conversation, the woman amhitious of gaining acquaintance with her fellow beings, yet ignorant of the graceful turns of speech; the woman afflicted with a hazsh voice, unpleasant accent and untuneful and ill timed laughter. Young women she hoped to gain as her pumis-girls about to enter society, or those suffering from personal defects of manner which, if corrected in youth would not in after years become objectionable and irremediable characteristics. Carefully the simple curriculum for the study of this pretty accomplishment of conversation was prepared. Some friends, partly from curiosity and partly from careless generosity, joining ant home last evening. A large number the class, shortly converted it into a gos- of their friends joined them in the sip tes, and the little conservatory of conversation lost its object and its standing and very quietly died of sheer lack of tife,-Illustrated American.
