

ANOTHER ROAD CAMP BOLT, CONVICT ONLY 21 NOW FUGITIVE

Harold Dicker, an Auburn Prison convict, "took it on the lam" sometime before 8 o'clock this morning from Lord's Hill road camp, Onondaga County. Capt. John Fitzgerald reported the escape to Warden Brophy here. Dicker is the second prisoner to escape this week. The first was Joseph Donato who ran away from Virgil cantonment last Sunday but was captured about 24 hours afterwards. He now is in the prison jail.

Dicker was sentenced to serve two and a half years at Sing Sing Prison for grand larceny. He was sentenced in Kings County March 31 last and was transferred to Auburn Prison July 25 last. He was sent to the road camp shortly after he was received here. He is 21 years old, five feet, eight inches in height and weighs 151 pounds. He has an unusually large nose, dark curly hair and his complexion is dark. His home is at Coney Island.

Better Fire Protection for Auburn

Editor of The Citizen-Advertiser: After witnessing the Hielop and Masonic Building fires, I think the proper thing would be to procure a location in the central part of the business section, build a fire proof building, install two steam boilers and two steam fire pumps. This would be a stationary, not portable plant.

city lines at a place where mains are large enough for the section of the high pressure pumps. Also, if possible, connect with the Oswego Outlet for another section line.

Portable fire pumps are all right for small fires and fires where there is plenty of room around buildings.

These stationary fire pumps should be high pressure, high duty pump, operated by steam, not gasoline or electricity. Steam is the most reliable and reliability is what counts in fire protection.

Pipe every building in the district with sufficient size pipes and outlets to take care of an ordinary fire in that particular building and equip every building with two or more large hose connections on the outside of all available sides of building. If a building has a court have a connection in the court.

When buildings are not uniform in height place connections on highest, thus being able to throw water from above on low buildings. Put pipes on sides of high buildings which are exposed to fire from lower buildings, all such pipes to be drilled, for openings in the bottom, to act as a fire curtain.

In case of large fire you have a large number of high pressure openings on sides of all buildings for hose in place of hydrants, but hydrants can also be used with the present equipment of pumps.

I do not know much about the cost of such a system but I do know about the reliability of this system. It would cost more than this station would cost more than the price of two of the present pumps.

Several practical citizens have talked with me and believe that something should be done, especially as it is pictured vividly when we stop and see the Masonic building being rapidly consumed.

With this high pressure system, only about half of the present amount of hose would be necessary, that item alone would be worth saving. There would be no long lines of hose strung out in all directions from numerous hydrants, some of which are 500 and 1,000 feet from the fire. No time of hose reaching from ground to top of some building near fire which firemen are compelled to hold. No loss of pressure through the long line of hose.

Instead of handling a line of hose reaching from ground to top of building with the added weight of water only 25 to 50 feet of hose would be necessary to carry to each hose connection.

There is a lot of valuable time lost in stringing hose from hydrants and many a large fire can be averted with water and pressure at hand.

New Gas Bomb Makes Bandits Meek; It Gives Them Dryland Seasickness

(By Howard W. Blakeslee) (Associated Press Science Editor)

Pittsburgh, Pa. (AP)—A new bandit gas that makes its victims meek has been developed here. Its name is diphenylaminechlorarsine, which means that it is composed of carbon, hydrogen, nitrogen, chlorine and a trace of arsenic. It is said to be as harmless as tear gas, but capable of taking the resistance out of a criminal for about 15 times as long.

Bandits do not have to go to sea to become seasick now. If they inhale the fumes from a new bomb developed at Pittsburgh, Pa., they will become nauseated and go through all the experiences of seasickness. The grenade, containing solid matter which turns to gas when it hits the air is shown above.

The actual contents of the "seasick bomb" is not a gas, but a solid, yellow-green, faintly aromatic. Upon burning contact with the atmosphere creates a canary-yellow smoke. The stinger of this sneeze, cough, becomes nauseated and goes through other experiences of seasickness. J. W. Long, president of the Federal Laboratories, which developed the bomb, says:

"For quite a time following the World War, criminals had the upper hand in using various instruments of warfare that had been uncovered during the conflict. Science took up the battle against them with the idea that it should be made as bloodless and harmless as possible. "Tear gas was successful in numerous instances. Now another forward step has been taken in making a new high-speed grenade that holds four times as much gas as those used heretofore, and is but slightly larger. It is timed to explode almost instantly, overcoming a fault of early gas grenades which sometimes were boomerangs when they were returned quickly by bandits before having time to go off."

Crex Carpet Co. Stock Barred

New York, Sept. 2.—(AP)—As result of "certain unusual transactions," the New York Stock Exchange today suspended trading in the stock of Crex Carpet Company. The exchange disclosed that information regarding the situation in this issue had been placed in the hands of the New York state attorney general. This was said in brokenage quarters to be the most important action taken by the exchange in connection with unusual transactions in any issue since disclosure of wash sales in Manhattan Electrical Supply resulted in suspension of the brokerage firm of Suro & Co., in 1930, which was subsequently reorganized and reinstated.

Crex Carpet has been a relatively minor issue in the stock market, although it has from time to time gyrated rather widely. The shares touched a low of $10.25 a share this year, but had recently reached a high of $18.75. It had been inactive during the past few days. The last transaction was on Tuesday, when the stock closed at $24 a share. In 1931, it ranged from $19.62 to 10.25, and in 1932, it surged up to a peak price of $57.62 from $15.

The company was originally known as the American Grass Twine Co. It owns some 50,000 acres of grass lands in Wisconsin and Minnesota, and has manufactured a variety of grass, cotton and woolen goods at plants at St. Paul, Minn., and Newburgh, N. Y., but in March of this year, the company announced the sale of its Newburgh mills, explaining that manufacture would be concentrated at St. Paul.
